A blue-tinted photograph of a construction site. In the center, a large, square concrete manhole cover is being lowered into a deep trench by a crane. Two workers in hard hats and safety vests are guiding the cover. To the left, another worker stands near a pile of pipes. To the right, a worker is visible near a wooden frame. In the background, there are residential houses and trees. The overall scene is a construction project in progress.

STAY TUNED

A blue-tinted photograph of a construction site. In the foreground, a large, striped traffic cone is partially visible. A group of about ten construction workers, wearing hard hats and safety vests, are standing in a line across the middle ground. Some are looking towards the camera, while others are looking away. In the background, there are trees, a utility pole, and some construction materials. The overall scene is a typical construction site during the day.
